SUNLIGHT MEANS HEALTH

During the all-too-short sunny times we get in this country, those who take the best advantage of the sunlight store up the biggest fund of health for the winter months. But there is the question of complexion. Few can stand the force of the sunlight with impunity unless fortified by the regular use of

THE KELWAY COLOUR BORDER.

The formation of actual scenes of beauty with living subjects abounding in interest, individually, would seem to be a pleasant and worthy amusement, and one as full of dignity as the portrayal of such scenes on paper or canvas.

The late Dean Hole truthfully wrote in "Our Gardens": "There has been no introduction which has had such happy and universal influence in extending and increasing the enjoyment of a garden as the HERBACEOUS BORDER." One of the first remarks of one's hostess in the country nowadays is "Would you care to see my new Herbaceous Border?" or "my new KELWAY Border?"

Send dimensions of space to be filled, and the effect required, stating aspect and soil and asking any questions.

EST. 1843

Hand Made Furniture

4' 10" Mahogany Sideboard. £28 10 0

This beautifully proportioned, albeit eminently practical Sideboard of selected Mahogany, with its commodious cupboards and deep drawers, one of which contains a tray lined for cutlery, is typical of our unique range of fine quality hand-made furniture.

The finely-shaped legs with their delicate "reeding," the gracefully bowed centre, the superbly figured "flame" veneers — all reveal the hand of the craftsman who is in love with his work.

Unlike the standardised "mass-production" furniture of commerce, our models are individual creations of exclusive design, and since we are the actual makers our prices are considerably less than those prevailing elsewhere for the same class of work.

HOW "THE GARDEN" CAN HELP YOU

Topical Points from recent issues.

CLEANING HERBACEOUS BORDERS.

We all know how soon a neglected garden becomes an untidy wilderness. There is no part of a garden that shows neglect more, or sooner, than the herbaceous border. I heard an amateur cultivator remark recently that he had given up, or was giving up, the growing of herbaceous plants because they entailed so much labour in maintaining the border in good condition, and, furthermore, that he intended growing roses instead. Well, I think there is room for both sections and all entail labour. Without the latter we should not value the plants as they deserve. To clean a herbaceous border thoroughly, begin the work now. Many plants in it cannot be moved every year, neither is it desirable to do this, and if we attack underground-rooting weeds, such as couch, and others that lose their leaves in the winter, we are able to trace and clean them out. Of course, it is a very easy matter to Dutch hoe the soil and rid the surface of seedling weeds, but even this work is not always timely done. But merely for the sake of tidiness do not cut off the stems of herbaceous plants prematurely; be sure that such are ripe for removal and examine closely the clumps, removing all foreign matter collected there.

POT TREES.

Where it is intended to grow fruit trees in pots, now is the time to make a selection. The kinds usually grown are peaches, nectarines, plums, figs, cherries and, often, apples and pears. Apricots are too generally a failure to warrant their being grown in quantity. To be a success a house should be set apart for their accommodation when the time arrives for placing them inside. It is useless to grow them in vineries and peach houses where the roof is covered with foliage. Unfortunately, in some private establishments this is done. When the various fruit trees are received they should be potted at once, using pots just large enough to take the roots; for the most part receptacles 10ins. to 12ins. in diameter will be quite large enough. Good quality fibrous loam will form the staple, to which is added a liberal sprinkling of old mortar rubble. The pots should be provided with ample drainage, and the soil made fairly firm. Place the trees in the open and see that they do not suffer from dryness at the roots. If desired established trees in pots can be bought; several fruit nurseries specialise in this particular branch.

SOME READERS' OPINIONS

A subscriber from Ashton-under-Lyne writes:—

"I have only been a reader of 'The Garden' for about three months, never having seen it before that time, but as a printer wish to congratulate you on the excellent appearance of it, and as a gardener on the interesting and admirable articles that appear in it from week to week."

An American reader writes:—

"When I first began to subscribe to 'The Garden' I preserved only cuttings, but I ultimately found its columns so full of material that I now preserve the issue intact . . . I am an amateur intensely interested in the future development of an intelligent horticulture in America such as exists in England."

From a reader in British Columbia:—

"I enclose a list of friends who are all lovers of gardens, and hope they will all be persuaded to subscribe to 'The Garden.' Your beautiful paper is my weekly joy, and I am most thoroughly interested in its articles and the lovely pictures, many of which are of my favourite haunts in England."

An appreciation from another reader:—

"Just a word in praise of your paper. The printing, formation and illustrations are really magnificent. I particularly appreciate the articles on 'Simple Gardening' which are of special interest to amateur gardeners of limited ground and means. So charmed was I with your artistic illustrations that for years before I managed to own a garden I bought the paper merely for their sake."

One of our earliest subscribers writes:—

"As an old subscriber, I believe from the very first issue of 'The Garden,' I have taken a great interest in its development, and I consider it now by far and away the best gardening paper in circulation. I recommend it to all my gardening friends."

The woman who uses Lux need never worry about her hands. Lux is as mild as the finest toilet soap: it leaves the hands white and soft

3. Dip and re-dip in this pure rich lather.

4. Rinse in clean water. Squeeze water gently out, without wringing

Lux for everything you wash yourself

It is the softness and loose texture of wool that makes it warm. To keep the warmth in woollens wash them only with Lux—scarves, jumpers, woolly coats, woven underwear—even rugs and blankets. And use Lux, of course, for all silks, crêpes and other fine materials.

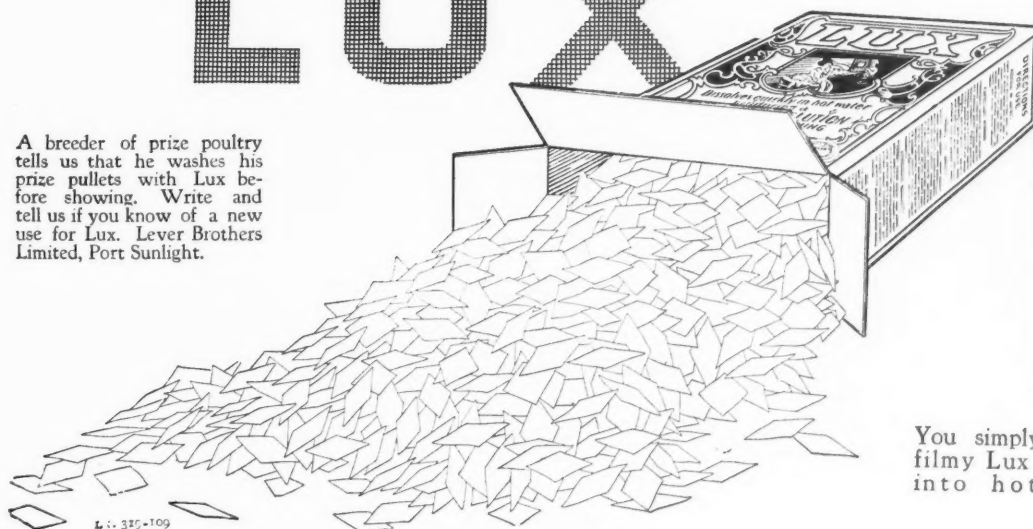

In fact use Lux for everything you wash yourself. It is just as easy as washing your hands. The filmy Lux diamonds are made to melt instantly into a rich foam of almost magic cleansing power, which yet is gentle to the frailest fabrics.

Be sure you get LUX—in the familiar carton. So-called substitutes, sold loose, are thick shreds of ordinary soap. Lux is unique: make sure you get Lux.

Outdoor Holiday in South Africa

OPEN-AIR life in South Africa is generally enjoyable all the year round. Outdoor recreations are plentiful there and make a holiday doubly enjoyable.

In an environment that is often noble, and in the most equable of climates, there is good fishing, yachting and surfing. Golf and tennis are to be had in nearly every town and in many of the villages. It is the country for the mountaineer. Motoring, too, is exceptionally enticing in those surroundings and in that wonderful air, and some big game shooting is still obtainable.

The lover of sport will find South Africa a satisfying resort for a holiday.

Details may be obtained from the Publicity Agent, Office of High Commissioner for Union of South Africa, Trafalgar Square, London, W.C.2. Write for descriptive travel book "E.S." It is free.

Spore bearing Mycelium on gelatine after 48 hours, showing rapid growth and nature of Dry Rot fungus.

INSURANCE against fire is readily undertaken because the destruction wrought is swift and spectacular. Yet damage by dry rot decay can be almost as costly and is as cheaply provided for.

A few shillings spent on treatment of wood-work by the Solignum cold process is in the nature of a small premium, paid once only—but it averts costly repair bills.

Brush or spray Exterior Solignum over all the wood exposed or concealed—no preparation—no heating—no mixing.

Wood treated with Solignum is as well protected as the bricks against decay, and will last as long.

LIFE is full of sunshine for this happy little maiden. She is happy because she is healthy, and she is healthy because she is given the nourishment which is best suited for the system of a growing child.

Her mother writes: "My little daughter, aged 2½ years, has had 'Ovaltine' as her daily beverage for the last 18 months. You will see how bonny she is. She is naturally very much admired, and I am often asked what I feed her on. I never hesitate to mention your food, for it was the only thing that suited her after she was weaned. I think 'Ovaltine' is the last word in food for growing children."

Food abundantly rich in easily digested nourishment—that is what children need and that is exactly what "Ovaltine" is. It is prepared in the form of a delicious beverage and should take the place at mealtimes of any other beverage. Ripe Barley malt, rich creamy milk and fresh eggs are the constituents of "Ovaltine," one cup of which contains more nourishment than 7 cups of cocoa, 12 cups of beef extract or 3 eggs.

Instant Warmth with Perfect Ventilation

In winter-time, more important even than heating is the question of fresh air in a room. How the one is ingeniously made to provide the other, explains the amazing popularity of the Radiation Gas Grates, which embody the patent "Injector-Ventilator." This exclusive feature ensures a constant steady circulation of pure, fresh air in the room, with avoidance of draughts, and has the full approval of the Medical Profession.

The Radiation Gas Grates have two openings under the canopy leading to the flue. The lower or "Injector" opening (A) carries away the entire combustion products, and the upper or "Ventilating" opening (B) carries away a large volume of air drawn from the room. The ascending current through the lower outlet promotes by Injector-action the ventilating function in the outlet above; the result is that while pure radiant heat is distributed throughout the room, the air of the room is changed a sufficient number of times to ensure an agreeable and healthy atmosphere being maintained.

However tastefully your room may be furnished and decorated, there is a Radiation Gas Grate that will suit it admirably. A variety of designs can be seen at your Gas Show-rooms. Also at Ironmongers', Stores, or at any of the show-rooms of the Radiation firms named below.

THE ESTATE MARKET

THE PASSING OF DEVONSHIRE HOUSE

BY far the most interesting announcement that we have to make this week concerns the future of a portion of the site of the historic mansion in Piccadilly, Devonshire House. It is important in itself, and still more, perhaps, because it foreshadows the hastening of the process of re-development of this once pre-eminent town house and its extensive grounds.

The following brief and formal note was sent to us a few days ago:

"Thirty-one thousand square feet of the middle portion of the Devonshire House site (Piccadilly), with a frontage of over two hundred feet to Berkeley Street, have been sold by Messrs. Knight, Frank and Rutley to Messrs. Thomas Cook and Son, for whom Messrs. Holland and Hannen and Cubitts, Limited, will immediately commence the erection of a very fine building for their Central London offices and bank."

The announcement is welcome, if only because it is a really reliable and authoritative announcement that a part of the famous property formerly belonging to the Duke of Devonshire has at length changed hands with a certainty of development. Rumour has been active enough for a long while as to this and that scheme and this and that reported purchaser. The history of the house has been so often told, and its various uses since the Duke of Devonshire vacated it are so well known, that there is no necessity now to reiterate these matters. A beginning has been made in the real development of this splendidly situated estate, and other potential purchasers may now reveal the extent of their belief in its possibilities. An early announcement, may, in fact, be expected, bearing on this point.

However much anyone may regret the severance of the ducal connection with the house, and the changes that must ensue on the development of the land, that regret must be tempered by the thought that for a few years the aspect of the property has been somewhat depressing and at times even undignified, and the transfer of the fine wrought-iron gates to the other side of the thoroughfare did not fail to diminish the impressiveness of the main frontage.

To-day (Saturday), at Canterbury, the Elizabethan house and 197 acres at Sarre, on the Canterbury-Ramsgate road, known as The Elms, comes under the hammer of Messrs. Knight, Frank and Rutley. There is excellent panelling in the house. The world's championship for malting barley was won by the produce of this farm on one occasion.

Adele, Lady Meyer, has purchased Chipstead Place, Kent, through Messrs. Knight, Frank and Rutley, the vendors being represented by Messrs. Curtis and Henson. The former firm sold her Essex seat, Shortgrove, in July, and a few weeks earlier they dispersed Sir Rowland Hodge's collection at Chipstead Place.

Logie House, with 1,600 acres, near Forres, has been sold by Messrs. Knight, Frank and Rutley this week. A Scottish correspondent says the buyer is Sir Alexander Grant, Bt., of Messrs. McVitie and Price.

Lyndon Hall, Norfolk, with about 1,000 acres, has been sold by Messrs. Knight, Frank and Rutley. The property is bounded on the north side by the River Wissey, which affords three and a half miles of trout fishing. The firm has also disposed of The Node, Welwyn, 313 acres, the property of Sir Charles A. Nall-Cain, Bt.

At the Hanover Square auction of building land at Edgware, there was a large attendance, and 150 acres were sold for £63,300. Some of the land fetched £1,000 an acre. A few years ago land in the immediate vicinity had only an agricultural value. What will it be in twenty years time? A glance at Golders Green may give the answer.

TOWN HOUSES AND FLATS.

PRINCE ANTOINE BIBESCO has sold his fine house in Hyde Park Gardens. Messrs. Deacon and Allen acted in the matter with Messrs. Hampton and Sons. The latter firm's long list of sales, given a week ago in the Estate Market page, has been much lengthened, and now embraces, besides a good many country properties, the Grosvenor lease of the late Lord Justice Cozens-Hardy's house in Halkin Place, and a freehold in Kensington Court, as well as one of the delightful little houses in "that peaceful abode of artists," Melbury Road, Kensington. Among their early sales will be that of Burgh House, one of the most characteristic of the older well preserved houses on the fringe of Hampstead Heath. Its panelling, hair-powdering closets, and staircase all attest its age—and it was built in 1704.

Hampstead houses of some architectural distinction in Elm Row, almost under the shadow of the modern and elegant spire of Christ Church, have changed hands through Messrs. Potter.

Mayfair residential flats, fifteen in a block, known as The Upper Feilde, in Upper Brook Street, Grosvenor Square, have all been let in a few weeks by Messrs. John D. Wood and Co., some of the flats having been taken before the structure was completed. The derivation of the name of the flats, and a short description of them, appeared in the Estate Market page on August 16th.

MOVING A TUDOR STRUCTURE.

MR. H. AVRAY TIPPING is mentioned in the illustrated particulars of a freehold to be sold at the London Mart on October 8th, by Messrs. Curtis and Henson. They state that a new wing with domestic quarters was added under his direction, and that the property was purchased by Sir Ernest Horlick, Bt. The freehold in question, Coombe Wood House, on Kingston Hill, represents an exceedingly successful experiment in transplantation of a Tudor house. It is an old timber building which was originally erected in 1483, on the banks of the river Colne, at Hythe, near Colchester. History records that at the death of Henry VIII the house was in the occupation of Catherine Parr, who lived there for some time and whose arms are shown in the stained glass in various windows. After 1600, to the latter part of the eighteenth century, we have yet to discover its history, but about that time it was converted into a Georgian residence, and the original timbers covered up and a balustrade added. Later, it was used as an inn, and was, so it is said, "discovered" by Mr. Thornton-Smith, who removed it some fourteen years ago to its present site at Coombe Wood. Of course, in rebuilding, advantage was taken of the occasion to instal modern requisites, such as electric light, central heating and so forth, and the result is luxury embodied in a residence that in all respects, except site, can claim antiquity. This old Tudor half-timbered house stands in grounds that have been carefully laid out to provide a proper setting for it. The 4 or 5 acres are freehold.

SALE OF HAMPSHIRE HOLDINGS.

LORD ASHBURTON has disposed of 819 acres of the outlying portions of the Grange estate, Alresford and Itchen Abbas, for £20,835, with additional sums to be paid in respect of the timber. Messrs. Warrington and Sons were the agents, and the sale represents eight of the lots comprised in the particulars at the auction a few days ago.

Normanton Hall and the park were withdrawn at £8,400, at the auction by Messrs. Duncan B. Gray and Partners, in conjunction with Messrs. Royce. A good many of the comparatively smaller properties in the 6,000 acres submitted had been bought in private negotiation by the tenants. Empingham Audit Hall was not offered, the vendors having made a present of it to the village. Among the larger holdings to find a buyer under the hammer was Armley Lodge Farm, Hambledon, 172 acres, for £3,325.

The firm acted for the vendor of Avening Court, a sixteenth century Cotswold manor house and over 100 acres, sold to a client of Messrs. Knight, Frank and Rutley. The Court is mentioned in Cromwell's "Inventory of the Manor Houses of Sion Monastery," and the first Baron Windsor received a grant of it from Henry VIII.

Captain Walter Haynes, R.N.R., has sold the old-fashioned half-timbered house, The Ashes, Welford-on-Avon, Gloucestershire, through Messrs. James Styles and Whitlock's agency.

Nuffield glebe land, overlooking the Huntercombe golf links, and on the highest part of the Chiltern Hills, extending to 56 acres, has been sold by Messrs. Wright Brothers at Reading. It lies about 700 ft. above sea level, some four miles from Wallingford and six from Henley-on-Thames.

Yorkshire buyers attended Messrs. Boulton and Cooper's auction of the Byland-with-Wass and Thornton Hill estates, and such lots as changed hands made a total of over £10,000. Other lots, having the interest of proximity to one of the parishes, Coxwold, where Laurence Sterne wrote "A Sentimental Journey through France and Italy" and portions of "Tristram Shandy," remain for private treaty.

LORD SALISBURY'S BUILDING SITES.

LORD SALISBURY'S building land, 315 acres on the St. Leonards Common estate, near Bournemouth, was to have been submitted by Messrs. Fox and Sons last Wednesday, but the firm found a purchaser for the whole in private treaty well in advance of the auction. The firm had a very successful sale of another section of the Iford estate, Bournemouth, disposing of seventy-seven plots—every lot—for £8,345. The Iford estate comprises a large area on either side of the main Bournemouth to Christchurch road, between Pokesdown Hill and Iford Bridge. The first section, comprising eighty sites, was offered by auction on the estate in June, 1923, and the second portion, comprising ninety-six sites, was offered at Pokesdown on February 21st last. On both these occasions every lot was disposed of at the auctions. Since these auctions development has proceeded very rapidly and houses have been erected and found ready purchasers. The portion included in this auction is situate on the south side of the main road. The whole of the land is freehold.

Messrs. Goddard and Smith held a successful auction at Bishop's Stortford, when the following properties were disposed of: Little Hallingbury Hall, near Bishop's Stortford, a freehold of 250 acres; Daubneys Farm, Sheering, Essex, 50 acres; South House Farm, Little Hallingbury, a modern farmhouse and 175 acres; and Chambers Farm, Sheering, an old-fashioned freehold of 177 acres.

SHELLEY'S SUSSEX HOME.

THE home of the Shelley family in Sussex, Champions, 'Thakeham—is in the hands of Messrs. Harrods, Limited, for sale, at a merely nominal price for a genuine Tudor house and 40 acres, embodying the results of a large outlay in modernisation. We believe it is less than £3,000, if only 14 acres are taken. Champions, in the western part of Sussex, near Pulborough, is mentioned in Elwes' "Mansions and Manor Houses of Sussex" as having formerly been a house of some importance, belonging to the Shelleys. It belonged to John Shelley, who died in 1531, and at the beginning of last century was held successively by Sir Timothy Shelley, the poet's father, Percy Bysshe Shelley, the poet, and Sir Florence Percy Shelley, the poet's son.

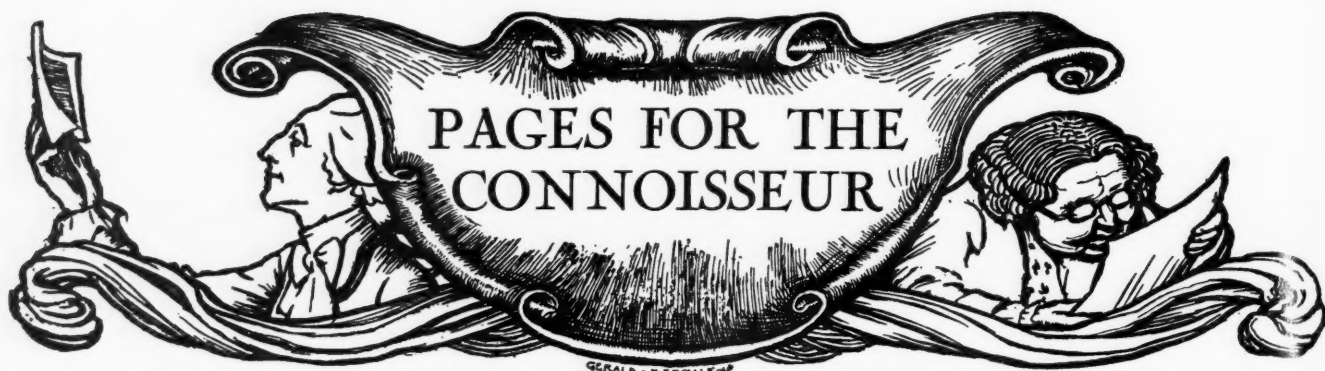

Another property, interesting by reason of its ownership until a recent period, is that in the Isle of Wight, Shidehill House, known to seismologists the world over as the late Professor Milne carried on an earthquake observatory there. On his death his instruments were bought by the Government and installed at Oxford. The property may be had for £2,750.

Waldo, Horley, a freehold residence with half an acre of grounds, has been sold under the hammer by Messrs. Harrods at Brompton Road.

SAXHAM HALL FURNITURE.

THE old English and other furniture and works of art in Saxham Hall, Bury St. Edmunds, will be sold on October 22nd and 23rd, by Messrs. George Trollope and Sons, who have just offered the mansion and 242 acres by auction. The firm has, in the last week or two, effected a number of sales of country houses with a moderate acreage, among them being the Jacobean Manor House, Lindfield; Upper Court and 16 acres at Esher; another modern residence, Netherfield House, Weybridge Heath, and 7 acres; Prior Court and 10 acres at Camberley; Litteridge and 2 acres at Sunningdale; and two old-fashioned houses—North Court, Finchamstead, and 10 acres; and Whyteleafe House and 7½ acres—at Whyteleafe. Besides ten freeholds in Orme Square, Bayswater, the firm has disposed of town houses in Cadogan Square, Grosvenor Place, Upper Brook Street and Eaton Square. They have, for private treaty, one of the choicest small properties, 11½ acres, ever offered in Surrey, twenty miles from London.

THE TAPESTRIES AT CHILHAM CASTLE

AMONG the tapestries at Chilham Castle are two panels of rare subject and composition, dating from the early years of the sixteenth century and belonging to that style which all true Frenchmen claim as French, more moderate people as Franco-Flemish and some cold-blooded critics as Flemish. In the works of the tapestry weavers of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries there is no subject so lovable as contemporary scenes from daily life, especially the Arcadian simplicity of the pastorals or forest subjects. These are shown in the background to the decorative motif of a "Parc aux Cerfs" in the two Gothic tapestries at Chilham.

The central motif is the same in both—a circular deer park of undulating ground, in which grow thistles, campanula, pansy, strawberry and other plants, among which rove or repose both fallow and red deer, stags and does. To right and left are two lofty fruit trees. In the distant part is a fountain, the upper part with columns and a conical roof. A paling encompasses the whole, the gate being in front. The door with semicircular top is fastened by a strong bolt and large lock, and to its handle is attached a long chain fastened to the collar of a fierce and huge dog in the foreground of the composition. The architecture of the doorway is interesting. On each side is a column with sturdy base and capital upon which is seated a lion, his tail twisted in a handsome curve, while he holds a lance with armorial banner. From behind these arises a rustic flamboyant arch of wood, with vine leaves pendent—the lower arch elliptical, the upper ogee, with characteristic large crockets, and springing into a finial. The shafts of the columns are marked into sloping divisions and these are jewelled. Similar columns are placed at the right and left cardinal points of the enclosure. In these features there appears to be, though clumsily expressed, the influence of the Renaissance.

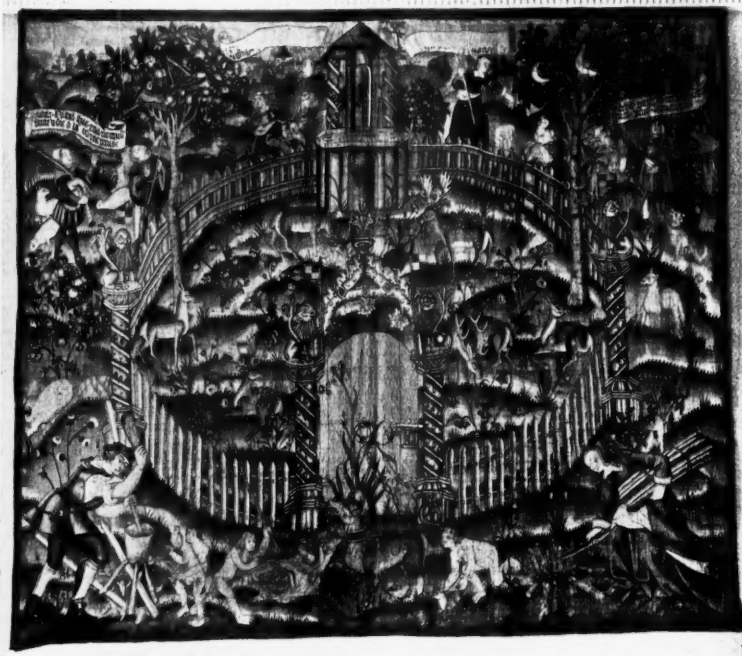

It is outside the "parc" that most of the charm of these tapestries is to be found. In the top corner on the right (Fig. 1) is a shepherd tending his flock and passing the time of day with a bagpipe player: a ribbon with inscription in old French and evidently not spelt in a clerical fashion being placed above. To the left of the fountain is another figure addressing them and caressing a dog: the inscription above is too mutilated to read except the lower part, "Maulgre tous jalou (?) envieulx." The distance is mountainous, with châteaux and other buildings.

The corresponding figure to the right of the fountain is a shepherdess, evidently inviting a shepherd, lower down, to dance, which the very virtuously declines and, in a banderole, rebukes her. By the expression of his dog, seated at his foot, it is of the same mind as its master.

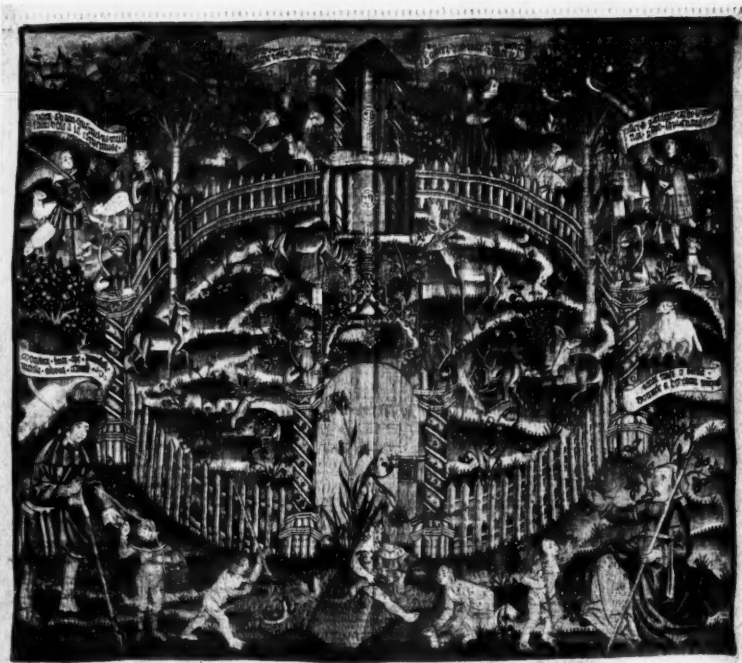

The lower part of the composition is most beautiful. To the left is a woodman cutting sticks on a block; nearer the middle is a stream with waterfowl and naked children hawking—a motif that occurs in fifteenth century tapestries. On the right is the figure of a woman with a bundle of faggots tending a fire; to her left is a naked child catching a hare or a rabbit. In the sward are planted roses, lilies and other plants, a magnificent iris being shown against the door.

Except in the lower part of the composition, the second "Parc aux Cerfs" at Chilham Castle (Fig. 2) is an almost exact replica of the first. Here a bridge spans the stream opposite the gate to the park: upon it a child sits fondling a dog. A shepherd, handing an apple to a boy with a basket, takes the place of the woodcutter; a seated shepherdess, holding a bunch of flowers, is in place of the woman with faggots; while an additional figure of a nude shepherdess is introduced. In the inscriptions above, the new figures are styled "Monami" and "Mamie," in the same way as contemporary tapestries indicate "L'amant" and "L'amie."

These tapestries showing deer parks were very popular in England and France in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, but, although fragments are found occasionally, very few entire and perfect tapestries are in existence. To the Loan Exhibition of Antique Furniture, etc., in the New Gallery, Edinburgh, 1917, Sir Robert Lorimer lent "Parc aux Cerfs" (one of a pair formerly in the John A. Holm collection) which was an exact duplicate of Fig. 1, except that it lacked a strip along the top descending below the roof of the fountain. "Parcs" are mentioned in the 1553 inventory of the Château de Thouars and in that of Amboise in 1574. Part of a tapestry of this kind still remains in the Long Gallery at Hardwick Hall, the lower part being a hurdle fence enclosing two fauns, and a castle in the distance. Outside appears a bird with fox-like ears. A very remarkable example is to be seen in the Museum, Rouen, dating from the second half of the fifteenth century. In it there are three winged stags, one in an enclosure supporting a standard upon which is St. Michael slaying the dragon, with inscribed banderole. Two other stags appear, with crowns on their necks and a shield with the arms of France, with inscriptions on banderoles over their heads. In the distance is a ship; nearer, rose trees and bushes with flowers. Early this year there appeared in one of the London auction rooms a deer park tapestry of different type. The fence was of rough wattles, the gate very richly patterned and evidently of metal, the pillars surmounted by domes and bearing a banner with a saltire cross. The park contained red deer, three stags and a hind, also a grotesque dromedary among rich flowers, while, in front, were two fruit trees, a crane, a vixen and cub, a wolf or dog, and a hare among flowers, within a border of flowers, ribbons and vases. The whole was a lowly version of the motifs of the Chilham Castle "Parcs."

A second series of tapestries in the solar at Chilham represents incidents in the history of Diana. The first shows the bath of Diana and her maidens—a beautiful group in sylvan setting by a stream, with peeps of hilly country in the distance. To the right appears Actæon with his dog and spear, the horns just sprouting on his head. In the foreground are irises and other plants, very finely rendered. A second tapestry shows views in a hilly wood with Diana and her ladies engaged in the hunt, shooting arrows, sounding horns, or hounding dogs on the trail. To the extreme right appears the death of Actæon. The third tapestry represents an avenue in the forest, up which is advancing the immortal huntress and her suite with dogs, while a huntsman bearing a spear approaches. Probably made in the seventeenth century, these tapestries are of superb decorative value.

THE 10 H.P. WINDSOR

EVERY annual Motor Show witnesses the debut of a few entirely new cars, and one inevitably wonders how many of them will survive the test of submission to the public market so that they may again glint from their stands at the next year's Show. Of these newcomers about one-half is heard of and seen a second time and the other half seems to disappear and simply lapse from the public memory. At last year's Show one of the newcomers was the Windsor, and it was recognised by many of those whose opinions count in matters automobile as a car that would not be likely to disappear before the next Show was due and as a car that would be able to put up a very useful fight for its existence on the highly competitive markets of to-day. There were two reasons for this recognition, which has been upheld by the event: the first was that the design of the car was obviously one of considerable merit, the second was that the makers of the car were a concern already firmly established in the motor industry. True, Messrs. James Bartle had not previously made a motor car, but their car bodies belonged to that class that has raised the term "London built" into a mark of quality in automobile coachwork.

The success that the Windsor car has attained is in some ways rather surprising and in all ways decidedly illuminating. There is a widespread idea among those who move on the fringe of the motor movement, and especially among owners of their first cars, that the modern demand is entirely for the lowest-priced possible car in any given class—with, of course, always the exception of the big and high-powered luxury vehicles. The Windsor is one of several cars that exist and flourish as conclusive proof of the absurdity of this idea. Although motor car values have never been so attractive as they are to-day, never before has public judgment of a car been so highly educated and so far removed from the belief that most motor car necessarily means most value for a given sum of money. There are on the market at about the same price several foreign cars of double the power rating of the Windsor, and several English cars considerably bigger both in engine size and car dimensions, but yet the Lancaster Road establishment of Messrs. James Bartle is kept usefully occupied in satisfying a steady demand for Windsor cars.

ABOUT CRANK-SHAFT BEARINGS.

In the matter of design this car is thoroughly individualistic without being in any way freakish, and it does not embody any feature that in itself can be considered strikingly unconventional or controversial. In one respect only does the four-cylinder engine seem to suggest a note of discord in the harmony of modern ideas about engine design, and this is that it has only two bearings for its crank-shaft. A few years ago there were on the market quite a number of moderate powered cars with only two bearing crank-shafts, but they are nearly all either dead or dying, and very few quondam owners of one of these cars will pause to lament their deaths. But here we have a brand-new car, brand new in design that is, which proudly proclaims the fact that its crank-shaft has only two bearings!

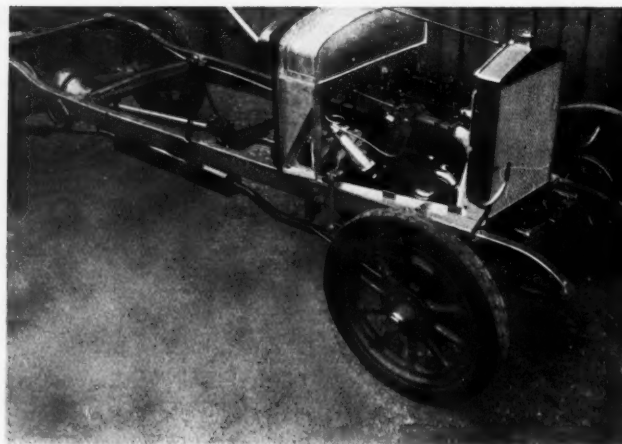

If one questions the policy that led to the adoption of such a mounting for the most important working component of the whole car, one is not met at the Windsor works with a more than half-apologetic "Well, you see, three bearings cost more money than two, and we are up against the price problem, and besides, two are not such a very poor substitute, after all." Rather does one meet with a very vigorous and emphatic declaration that two bearings are actually better than three in an engine of Windsor size and type, and, while one may leave the works unconvinced and unconverted by the vigour of the declaration, one feels compelled to admit that, after all, there may be something in what one has been told. Of course, the centre bearing of three must get a terrific thumping and it may be expected to wear, and surely no bearing at all is better than one that is worn.

Besides, the crank-shaft of the Windsor is so short and stiff that it simply cannot whip—in that case, would it wear as third bearing if it had one? Surely not; but if there really is no whip there is no need for a third or centre bearing, and there you are!

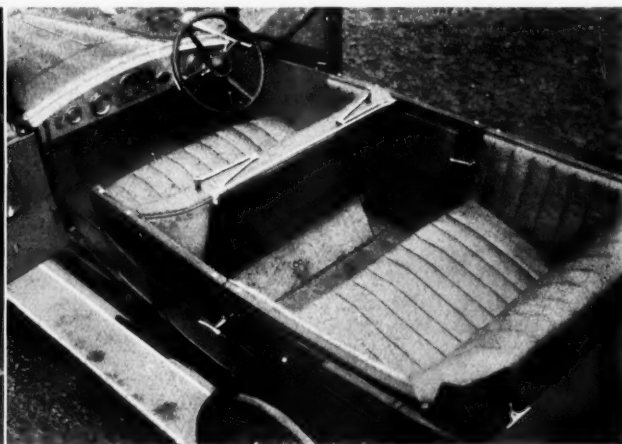

Also, the two end bearings of the Windsor are not of the ball type with their truly point or line bearing surface, on which the stiffest crank-shaft in the world must whip if only it turn over fast enough. For myself, I left the Windsor works converted, not to the belief that two bearings were better than three or more, but that two bearings were not necessarily as bad as my previous experience had indicated them to be, and that if some makers made a poor job of a two-bearing crank-shaft it did not follow that the faults that became apparent in their engines were inherent to the design. And my road experience with the Windsor car revealed that some two-bearing engines can be as smooth-running as some engines with three bearings. Nevertheless, my next car, unless it happens to be a Windsor, will have three bearings for its crank-shaft.

THE ENGINE.

The dimensions of the engine are 65mm. by 102mm., giving an R.A.C. rating of 10.4 h.p., and in design the whole power unit is a typical example of the best modern practice. The overhead valves mounted in the detachable cylinder head are operated by push rods and the whole mechanism is totally enclosed in a readily detachable polished aluminium cover which gives the engine a very neat and clean appearance. The hot-spot provision for the ingoing charge is one of the simplest and most effective to be seen on any car, for it consists of nothing more or less than the mounting of the carburettor on the exhaust manifold through which passes the induction pipe! From the point of view of the owner-driver there appears to be one snag and one only in the external design of this engine, and this is that the sparking plugs are mounted extremely close to the exhaust

The WOLSELEY "FOURTEEN"

The ever-growing popularity of the Wolseley "Fourteen" is founded upon real merit. The body is roomy, comfortable, and very smart in line; the springing is unusually good; and the engine develops a high degree of power on a low petrol consumption. The motoring correspondent of the "Birmingham Post," after an extended trial, reported on this model as follows:

The "Birmingham Post" says:

"This car has a striking performance combining in a most happy way that of the light car and the heavy car . . .

"On the road the car ran like a 'Six' with only a slight hiss from the carburetter to mark its progress . . . The quiet top-gear running is such as is usually associated only with cars of the luxury class.

"With full load the car held the road to perfection, making at the same time a high average speed. It is when running under such conditions as these that the merits of a big roomy car are particularly appreciated.

"Altogether the new Wolseley is a very remarkable car—especially when its most moderate cost is considered."

manifold just underneath it. On those dark nights when sparking plug and other troubles generally choose to happen, it would be very difficult to extract and replace a plug without a badly burned wrist or hand, and the alternative prospect of waiting until the engine had lost its bite—otherwise its heat—is not pleasant.

A good example of the independence of the Windsor designer is found at either end of his power unit, for he has adopted a method of water circulation that, while not new, is comparatively rare—certainly not so widely used as it deserves to be. The connection between cylinder head and barrels is through outside piping, so that when the head is removed and replaced no concealed water joint has to be broken and re-made. It is quite a good scheme, and it has always been a mystery to me why it is not more extensively adopted, especially in view of the numerous complaints that are heard about the frequent troubles that arise with water joints in conventionally designed detachable heads. Circulation of the cooling water is by thermo-syphon and although the car I tried was brand new and was driven fairly hard on occasion, the cooling system seemed thoroughly up to all demands that could be imposed upon it.

As a genuine modern car the Windsor has a positively driven dynamo with which the magneto is mounted in tandem. Originally—i.e., when shown at Olympia last year—this car had battery ignition; but that newly introduced magneto, the B.L.I.C., with stationary armature, seems likely to give a new lease of life to magneto ignition generally, and the Windsor people have acted very wisely in adopting it. If only some of our manufacturers who go in for racing on a large scale would consider the claims of various British inventions, such as this, instead of rushing abroad for their ignition equipment, British cars might reasonably hope for more success in big racing events than they are in the habit of securing.

TRANSMISSION.

Transmission is through a dry plate clutch, four-speed gear-box and open propeller shaft to the spiral bevel driven rear axle. The clutch is quite satisfactory in use and the gear change is rather easier in use than is normal, though the particular car that I tried suffered from a tendency as an example of one of those things that all car makers seem determined to do for the sake of altering at a later date. Of course, this Windsor device is being scrapped and replaced by a neat and very effective-looking trigger. The gate is further unusual in that the lever is pushed into top instead of pulled.

Braking is by internal expanding shoes on all four wheels, the Windsor at £395 enjoying until recently the distinction of being one of the two lowest priced British cars so equipped. The hand lever operates the same pair of rear wheel shoes as does the pedal, but, of course, only the pedal operates the front wheel shoes also. Suspension of the car is by semi-elliptic springs all round, with wheels for 710mm. by 90mm. tyres, though balloon tyres are to be available to those who prefer them.

BODYWORK AND EQUIPMENT.

The extra cost of the Windsor car by comparison with most others of its size and engine power is largely justified by the detail finish of its bodywork and the very complete equipment that is standard to the car. The four-seater body is roomy and comfortable, with every little corner and detail finished to a high standard, the upholstery, which is good in quantity and quality, combining very harmoniously with well designed seat angles to give a very easy and natural sitting position. Whether the stiff flaps that are fitted to the three-door pockets are an unmitigated advantage is a matter of opinion and personal taste. They cannot curl up as do soft leather flaps, but they are apt to catch against the side of the seat or passenger on it, so that the pocket cannot be opened without previous opening of the door of the car.

An idea of the completeness of the equipment may be gathered from the statement that it comprises driving mirror and screen wiper, while in more important respects the springs are encased in gaiters and there is a two-way tap to the fuel tank, although there is a level gauge on the instrument board, so that the risk of running out of fuel is much reduced. It is always a problem to me why every manufacturer does not incorporate this reserve supply tap in all fuel tanks, for it costs practically nothing, when not wanted it is entirely out of the way, it cannot give trouble, tank at the rear of the chassis in which the main tool supply is carried; at present this compartment is without a lock, and though it is not usual to lock up tools carried inside the car one feels that for an outside compartment some such safeguard would be advisable.

ON THE ROAD.

As the car tested for the purpose of this article was a brand new specimen, its road performance was obviously not of the best. That it to say that it was not so good as might reasonably be expected from the same car after it had completed the running-in process—say 1,200 miles. Yet it was by no means a poor performance: The 10 h.p. engine proved itself capable of hauling the fully laden four-seater car quite comfortably at 44 m.p.h., and while the claim that cars from which the newness has been carefully removed will attain some ten miles an hour more than this figure seems rather surprising, yet I soon formed the opinion that after its first thousand miles the car I tried would be doing its 52 m.p.h. or 53 m.p.h. quite comfortably.

The clean near side of the Windsor engine. Dynamo and magneto are just visible at the bottom of the illustration.

As a hill climber the car is quite good if its gear lever be properly used, for the ratios are well chosen, and while the car could certainly master any main road gradient in Great Britain on its lowest gear, it is quite fast on ordinary hills on third. One cannot, of course, expect quite the same flexibility and tractability on a high gear from a 10 h.p. car that one expects and gets from one of much higher rating, but the Windsor is a very easily controlled vehicle. Its smooth and efficient clutch—which, by the way, showed a slight tendency to slip towards the end of my 200 miles run—and its easy gear change give it a useful combination of docility and rapid accelerative power in traffic. One of the strongest assets of the car is its steering, which is adequately light but very sure and safe on all surfaces, and its function of control is well seconded by the suspension system. In the matter of road holding the car is quite up to the fairly high standards of to-day and, quite apart from the invaluable four-wheel brakes, one feels that in the Windsor one has a car that will not only go anywhere but will take its occupants there in complete safety and generous comfort.

This is not one of those cars that are remarkably low priced to buy, but the Windsor can put up a very sound claim to being economical in a much more important respect. It will be cheap to maintain. Its design and the quality of the material used in its construction may be taken as a fair indication that the car will be long-lived and easy of adjustment—which means economical in maintenance—while it is extremely economical in fuel. Even with fairly exacting driving we averaged very little less than 40 m.p.g.,

for the gear lever to stick slightly in third—an unusual trouble, not at all serious and much less annoying than the far commoner tendency for the lever to jump out. The gate is rather foolishly arranged in that the reverse slot is alongside second and is covered by a plate to prevent accidental engagement which has to be raised or lowered between every change from first to reverse or vice versa. I mention it merely and yet, when it saves one from being stranded for lack of fuel, it is an immeasurable blessing.

The side curtains are of the kind that may be used without the hood—this latter, by the way, is not so easy in erection as it might be—and there is also a rear wind screen. Besides a foot-rest tool-box inside the body of the car, there is a compartment in the form of a dummy fuel and this is the figure reasonably claimed as the average consumption with one of these cars in normal use. To a large extent the credit for this must be given to the hot-spot arrangement already described, but the influence of general design and over-all efficiency of the chassis is, of course, an important factor. One feels justified, therefore, in summarising this Windsor as a genuinely efficient motor car. Long life, easy adjustment and maintenance and economy in fuel are the three chief ideals at which the motor car designer should aim and by the satisfaction of which he will secure the greatest market for his product. The designer of the Windsor seems to have made very good progress along what is unquestionably a really difficult path.

An Interesting Experience with Balloon Tyres.

IN view of the development of the low pressure, over-size, or balloon, tyre, considerable interest attaches to the recent experience of an acquaintance with them. He is a man whose knowledge and experience of all things connected with motoring is very much above the ordinary, and on whose opinions and judgments we would rely almost as if they were our own: for, during a period of several years, we have found him a most reliable informant and critic on all aspects of the pastime. He has had occasion, recently, to make a certain run of just over fifty miles across the southern counties, his route embracing both main and by-roads. He is a very competent and also quite fast driver, and the times he puts up on some of his journeys are of the kind that, claimed by most motorists, would be regarded by the average driver of experience as requiring a very large pinch of salt. But, from personal knowledge and actual experience of this man at the wheel, we are prepared to accept his claims as sound and just.

The car he drives is a 10 h.p. Wolseley, one of those light cars that, though not remarkable for their maximum speed capacities in their standard touring editions, are yet able to put up very useful averages in a typical cross-country run. This particular journey of fifty miles is one that, although marred by no severe hills or bad traffic, has several quite useful climbs, and passes through five or six villages and towns in which careful driving is necessary—and our driver is not of the kind to ignore such needs—while its possibilities for really fast travelling are seriously lessened by the presence of numerous very awkward corners and bends in the road. These are of that most "tricky" of all characters, the deceptive kind. They look innocent and easy, but the driver who tackles one of them at just a trifle too high a speed is apt to find himself in a very unpleasant predicament, for their stiffening curves with the absence of any pretence at banking may easily cause a car travelling too fast to overturn or at least to skid very badly.

While his Wolseley Ten was equipped with standard tyres the best time our friend could put up over this run was two hours—not at all bad time considering the nature of the route and that, in spite of the fact that two of the towns to be passed through are noted for the activities of their police, he has never even been checked by a gentleman in blue. The time of two hours was the best achieved after the road had been learnt, as only an experienced motorist can learn a road, and so the improvement to be recorded can in no way be attributed to the often important factor of better knowledge of the road.

Fitting balloon tyres to his car, Mr. A. once more set out on his journey, which he undertook in his usual frame of mind of not wishing to waste any time, yet observing all the usual courtesies and decencies of the road. On his very first trip with the new tyres his time was reduced by about 15 per cent.—it became one and two-thirds instead of the previous two hours, and this is now his regular figure. He attributes the gain entirely to the new tyres, as how could he do otherwise in view of the fact that the tyres alone are different from the conditions governing his previous trips?

Greater road adhesion, enabling greater speed without any loss of safety on the numerous corners, is the secret of the change. He tells us that if he took some of the corners at the same speed on ordinary tyres that he takes them on his balloons he would inevitably turn his car over or become involved in some other form of crash. As it is, he has been able to increase his speed and yet maintain his safety factor.

On account of their number and character it is the corners that count so much on this particular route. But his car speed on the straight has also been slightly increased, and it is now possible for him to travel at the higher figure; whereas, previously, even had the same speed been within the capacity of the car, he could not have employed it, because his braking power and general controllability would not have been so good as they now are. The experience is certainly a very illuminating testimony to the value of balloon tyres from one point of view, and it will be interesting to see whether extended experience with the tyres reveals any defect that proves to be more than adequate counterbalance to the assets.

A TYRE TRAP.

While on the subject of tyres we may give a warning that should prove useful to motorists who are in the habit of changing their cars at all frequently. When such changes are made there are often left over from previous cars a few tyres or tubes that one thinks will come in useful at some future date for the new car. But the days when any tyre of given size could be relied to fit any rim of the same size—i.e., of the same size as the one from which the tyre had been removed—appear to be passing.

The now popular disc wheel requires a short-length valve, otherwise the long valve will press against the disc and will be inaccessible to the pump for inflation. On the other hand, the ordinary spoked wheel requires a long valve, for the short valve cannot stretch through the well of the rim sufficiently far to allow of its being connected to the pump.

Inner tubes are now sold with two sizes of valve, a long and a short, and it behoves the car owner to see that he is getting the kind that will suit his wheels when he is buying a new inner tube, and to avoid the snare of thinking that old tubes used on disc wheels will fit his new artillery or wire spoked wheels or vice versa.

Also à propos of tyre valves, another warning may be useful, quite apart from the suitability of any particular valve to any particular rim. This is that, whereas the Schrader type valve is now used almost universally by tyre makers, many inflation pumps are still fitted with connections for the old British valve, which will not fit the new type. An adapter, by means of which such a connection may be screwed on to either valve, costs only a few pence, and one ought to be embodied in every pump or carried in every tool kit. It may come as useful information to some readers to know that adapters of similar construction but with different thread can be obtained for making a car pump usable on a motor cycle or cycle valve and vice versa.

Position of the Fuel Tank.

THE recent and continued increase in the popularity of vacuum feed for the fuel on all types of cars has had the very beneficial effect of bringing the fuel tank to the rear of the chassis. No longer is mounting between the rear dumb irons the prerogative of the big and expensive car with pressure fuel feed, for some of the cheapest cars on the market have their tanks so placed. In theory and on grounds of general principle there is nothing to be said against the method, but there are two practical difficulties that sometimes arise. The first is that in this position the tank is particularly vulnerable and a comparatively slight impact into the rear of the car, as for instance if it be reversed a shade too far and run into some rigid obstacle, may easily result in putting the vehicle out of action by puncturing the tank. To overcome this some method of armouring seems well worth the extra expense involved. The wooden slats long used on all Daimler models are a step in the right direction, but they are not really strong enough and three or four strong metal bars mounted on the chassis and extended round and under the tank would cost very little money, need not be unsightly and would save many a disaster.

The other disadvantage of the rear mounting for the fuel tank is purely a fault in construction and it is pleasant to be able to record that it is not so common as it used to be. It is that the long pipe lines which are inevitable are delicate things and if not very securely attached to the chassis frame are very liable to fracture. A broken petrol pipe is seldom a joke; when the break occurs somewhere down in the bowels of the chassis, so that body floor-boards must be raised or a pit must be available before access can be gained to it, the remotest suggestion of humour entirely disappears from the situation. There are two methods of practically eliminating the risk of breakage: the first is for the attachment of the pipe to the chassis side members to be really secure, with the absence of any sharp bends in the pipe or any sharp metal projections against it. This is necessarily a job for the chassis maker, and its importance has fortunately, become far more keenly realised than it used to be. The other alternative is the use of flexible piping—known as Petro-Flex.

FLEXIBLE PIPING.

Petro-Flex is a patent pipe which may be relied upon for a number of years to conduct liquid fuel and oil, though it must not be used for water, and its external armouring means that it is for all practical purposes as strong and as reliable as the ordinary copper piping. It is now used extensively in aircraft, which is obviously the most exacting of all spheres for such a thing as a fuel pipe line, while it is extremely useful in motor boats where the pipe line often passes under more or less permanently fastened floor-boards and through other holes and places where rigid piping could not be easily located or withdrawn. It is sold by Hobdell, Way and Co., Limited, and may be recommended to those car owners who have suffered the annoyance of frequently breaking petrol pipes, however they may have been mounted on the car.

FUEL TANKS IN THE DASH.

When a fuel tank is mounted in the dash of a car there is often a long piece of fuel pipe straight from the tank to the carburettor with no rigid support midway. Nothing is more conducive to breakage and especially is this the case if there be no coils in the pipe to take up the vibration; such coils, by the way, should always be in the horizontal plane, for if vertically disposed they are very liable

"BP"

The British Petrol

Real motoring enjoyment depends largely upon the efficiency of your car—the ability to climb hills speedily and without effort—to overtake other traffic should you so desire—to indulge in a burst of speed when the road permits.

"BP," the British Petrol, ensures the fullest possible realisation of such ideals. Its absolute purity means a clean engine even after many thousands of miles running, and it is upon cleanliness that efficiency and economy depend, while its richness and volatility provide power and acceleration to a degree impossible with inferior fuels.

Practical proof of "BP" merit is to be found in the many racing successes and record speeds made on it this season.

to cause air locks. For such pipe lines Petro-Flex is especially useful and its value is greatest when there is no convenient point that may be used as a rigid support for the pipe.

The mounting of a fuel tank in the dash is the simplest method and position that can be found on a car, for it feeds the fuel to the carburettor by gravity, a force that is never likely to fail, and it is a cheap method. It has disadvantages which are not really insuperable, though many car makers seem unable to realise and counter them. The first is connected with the position of the filler cap. Often this is mounted on the top of the scuttle—i.e., outside the car, with the result that any splashing during the filling process, and especially if the fuel used be benzol, soon affects the paint and makes this, the most conspicuous part of the car, most unsightly. It is a location for the fuel filler that is gradually falling out of favour, but, extraordinary to relate, it is being replaced in some cases by the only worse position that there is—the filler on the instrument board! There are several otherwise quite satisfactory cars with it in this absurd position and many possible purchasers must be lost to them every year, for few car owners relish the prospect of continually drenching the clothing of their passengers in petrol, and the risk is always present. The best position for the fuel filler for a dash tank is under the bonnet and it is satisfactory to see that this is the mounting now most extensively adopted.

But, apart from this question of the filler cap, the dash mounted fuel tank has an inherent failing. It is that unless the tank be very strongly made with cross ribs inside it, which is apt to be expensive, a very unpleasant drumming noise will accompany the car whenever it is running with its tank not quite full. There are some cars that suffer from this defect to such an extent as to make riding in them positively unpleasant, but there are others with no evident difference in design or construction in this respect in which the annoyance is quite unnoticeable.

—AND UNDER THE BONNET.

An alternative to dash mounting that provides the benefit of gravity feed and has none of the disadvantages attendant on the older system, is the placing of the tank under the bonnet so that when this is lifted the whole tank is exposed. Obviously the filler cap for such a tank can only be in one place—under the bonnet. But there is another and even more important merit. This is that while a fuel tank may not need very frequent dismantling, when such a need arises it is generally urgent and at an inconvenient time. Now, a tank that is contained within the dash can often only be dismantled after much preliminary destructive work on the bodywork of the car, which takes time and if done by the professional repairer costs money. But a tank mounted on independent supports underneath the bonnet, so that when the bonnet is raised it is completely exposed, may be got at or entirely removed with a minimum of trouble. Further, it contributes towards the provision of a short pipe line, which is a step in the right direction towards the prevention of broken pipes. It is a cheap method of construction and, indeed, has been pioneered by some of our lowest priced cars, and its only disadvantage appears to be that it necessitates a rather longer bonnet than would otherwise be necessary. On the other hand a long bonnet satisfies modern ideas in the æsthetics of car build and so is an asset rather than a fault.

One car that has its tank so mounted has a filler cap large enough to allow of the insertion of one's hand quite easily. Cleaning of the tank is thus much facilitated, and any article dropped into it—a common happening with some car owners—can be easily removed. There is, of course, no good reason why the filler cap of any tank, irrespective of position, should not be of this useful size; but the fact remains that such an asset is seldom found on cars with tanks more conventionally mounted.

The 200-Miles Race.

THE result of the great 200 Miles Light Car Race at Brooklands on Saturday was never for a moment in doubt. At the outset, K. Lee Guinness, George Duller and H. O. D. Seagrave, driving practically identical Darracq cars, took the lead. Lap after lap was reeled off with the three cars maintaining both their lead from the field and their own order as indicated. The lead was never challenged; their distances from one another appeared never to vary by a yard until in the last few laps the three Darracqs closed up slightly, with the result that Duller finished 1-5 seconds behind Lee Guinness, and Seagrave 4-5 seconds behind Duller.

Considering that the winner's average speed for the 200 miles was 102.27 miles an hour, the mechanical, almost monotonous regularity of running of the three cars was even more remarkable than their very decisive victory over the rest of the field.

The Junior Car Club's 200 Miles Race, of which this was the fourth of the series, has been singularly favoured in the absence of accidents, but Saturday's event was unfortunate in this respect, as one of the cars in the 1,100 c.c. race overturned almost in front of the Grand Stands at "the Fork," the driver, Mr. E. B. Ware, and his mechanic both being seriously injured. The cause of the accident is variously ascribed to a burst tyre and to the entanglement of a broken driving chain with the single rear wheel; but it is not clear which event was cause and which effect.

Later in the race—long after the winners had finished—another sensational

Unique in design, the one big four-cylindere car that has fully developed the advantages of its type by its balanced engine and super-excellent workmanship, the 23-60 Vauxhall is "representative of the very best of road performances for cars of any size or type."*

The Vauxhall four-wheel braking system, again, is an advance on anything presented hitherto. You have four-wheel braking by simple cable-operated front brakes linked up with the famed Vauxhall transmission brake; you have an independent brake for the rear wheels only; you have thus two sets of brakes for two sets of brake-drums, and by alternately using them the risk of over-heating the drums on very long, steep hills is avoided.

incident occurred. J. G. Parry Thomas' "Thomas Special" burst a tyre and swerved in front of another competitor. An accident was avoided by skilful driving.

An incidental result of Lee Guinness' win was the breaking of the record for 200 miles irrespective of engine size, while numerous class records also fell to the Darracq in the course of the race. The achievement of this car—or of these cars, for the performances of all three were equally meritorious—will be better appreciated when it is remembered that their engines are but two cubic centimetres larger than that of one of the most popular 11.9 h.p. vehicles. Yet they succeeded in completing the distance of 200 miles in less than two hours.

The running of the 1,500 c.c. racers is always apt to overshadow that of the smaller fry in the 1,100 c.c. and 750 c.c. classes, but from either the theoretical or practical standpoint their achievements are, perhaps, even more noteworthy. Thus, the 1,100 c.c. race was won by O. Wilson Jones on a Salmson car at an average speed of 85.7 m.p.h., and the 750 c.c. race by E. C. Gordon England on an Austin at 75.61 m.p.h. The former, with a bore and stroke of 62mm. by 90 mm. is what is normally considered to be a 10 h.p. vehicle, while the latter is the popular 7 h.p. Austin, frequently, but both erroneously and unjustly, known as the "Baby."

The Perils of Night Motoring.

THE end of summer time brings to all motorists a recurrence of the horrors and dangers of travel on the roads after dark. It is now, unfortunately, impossible to restrict all our travelling to hours of daylight, and the fact that the dangers we most fear are dangers that might very easily be avoided in no wise lessens their seriousness. We cannot avoid them, they are preventable only by others, and these others seem not merely reluctant to take action, but determined not to cure the evils for which they are responsible.

Chief among these dangers is, of course, the cyclist without a rear light. Ever since the universal rear lamp lapsed with the end of D.O.R.A. there have been demands for its re-institution, and that such demands are not quite so absurd as in some quarters they are alleged to be may be judged from the fact that even the magistrates of Kingston-on-Thames think that cyclists ought to be compelled by law to carry these small but useful warning signals. And when the magistrates of Kingston express themselves as in agreement with some request made by motorists it may be taken for granted that that request is rather more than just sound. Coroners all over the country are also continually urging the need for compulsory rear lamps. Unfortunately, many fatal accidents are directly traceable to a cyclist without a rear light, even if he may not be the victim, and when he is the victim the coroner's court can seldom suggest whether the motorist is at fault or not.

It is sometimes urged by those who oppose the red rear lamp that its compulsory carrying would transfer the onus of a collision from the overtaking to the overtaken vehicle. Superficially, but only superficially, this adverse criticism is sound. Confining the question for the moment to cyclists, who are the most numerous and, as the smallest, also the greatest offenders, it must be remembered that no class of road user is more vigorous and more noisy in its protest against the powerful headlamps that motorists are compelled to carry to protect, not themselves, but these offensive obstructors that are so difficult to detect. Few motorists have escaped the voluble protests against powerful lamps that seem to be part of the night cyclist's stock in trade; none of us has driven through a winter without at least one very narrow shave from running down an unlighted cyclist riding well away from his near side of the road.

A QUEER PAMPHLET.

Some time ago that body which, with a membership of barely 1 per cent. of the total number of cyclists in this country, claims to represent the views of the majority, if not the whole, issued a booklet "Why Cyclists Object to Rear Lamps." That booklet may or may not still be in existence, but if it is not the world has lost one of the funniest and most amusing things that has ever appeared in print. As an example of the quality of its arguments may be mentioned two only, which are fairly representative of the lot.

Among the weighty authorities quoted as opposed to the cyclists' being compelled to carry a rear light is a one-time cycling journalist who very naturally wrote against the rear lamp that he did not want to carry. But this was written many years ago, and since that time this writer has become the editor of the Motor, than which no journal is now more vigorous in its advocacy of the universal rear light!

It has often been indicated, and quite rightly, that the use of a spot light on a car enables the driver to pick up unlighted obstructions that might escape the beam of his headlamps. This amusing booklet asks why should not all motorists carry such a spot light and so safeguard, not themselves, but the cyclist? The writer of the book is either unaware or has conveniently overlooked the fact that the spot light is illegal! In another place it is asked why should cyclists be compelled to go to the trouble and expense of fitting rear lights to protect themselves against motorists? It is not asked why motorists should go to the trouble and expense of fitting spot lights to protect others. It is demanded that they should, quite apart from the question of the legal penalties that would be attached to their so doing. Nor is it mentioned that the cost of the cheapest spot light is something like ten times that of quite a good rear lamp.

REAR LIGHTS FOR ALL.

There seems to be abroad a quite mistaken idea that when motorists ask that other road users should carry a warning lamp at night-time they refer only to cyclists. Nothing, of course, could be further from the truth. The argument is that all who travel on the highway at night-time and are precluded by the practical application of the law from using the footpath, where one exists, should carry this extremely simple and cheap form of safeguard. It is a safeguard not merely to the one who carries it but to others. While the cyclist may come off the worse on being run down by a motorist, the latter is by no means immune from danger, and in the case of overtaking a farm cart the motorist is likely to suffer most. Moreover, he does not ask others to do that which he does not do himself. Although of all road users the least likely to be overtaken, the motorist carries a lamp that serves no purpose but to warn those behind him of his presence on the highway. The illumination of the number plate which is usually effected by means of the tail lamp need not be so effected, for the law would be equally satisfied if the front number of a car were illuminated at night-time.

It is not without interest that almost the only active opposition to the compulsory rear lamp comes from the bodies that claim to represent cyclists, and from those members of Parliament whose sympathies they have been able to enlist. From this active opposition has arisen the idea that only cyclists are asked to contribute their share towards the amenities and safety of night travel. Owners of horse-drawn vehicles do not carry rear lamps because they are not forced to do so; but they give no evidence of supporting this absurd and ill-considered obstruction to a perfectly reasonable and universally useful requirement. Further, and of real significance, is the fact that large numbers of cyclists invariably carry the small and invaluable fitting in spite of the absence of any legal obligation to do so. This fact is real and important evidence that some cyclists appreciate the need for it, and also that to expect a full measure of safety when on the road at night-time they must contribute their share of measures towards ensuring it.

No useful purpose will be served by indulgence in mutual abuse and recriminations among the interested parties. The problem, if problem there is, should be tackled in a spirit of preparedness to give and take and a recognition that what is wanted is not a special favour displayed to one class of road user at the expense of another but a measure of recognition of the responsibilities as well as of the privileges that belong to every user of the King's highway. Our civilisation and our government to-day are theoretically based on that famous principle of Jeremy Bentham, the greatest happiness of the greatest number. There are few who will question that at present the greatest numbers of roadway users at night-time all over England are motorists. These do not, however, suggest or even wish that this majority should be used to oppress or cause inconvenience to others. But they do ask that it shall be regarded as entitling them to a certain amount of consideration, especially when that consideration in its practical effect is to be a safeguard for others. LEX

More World's Records at Brooklands.—A remarkable performance was achieved at Brooklands on September 2nd, when Mr. F. L. Rapson's 40 h.p. six-cylinder Lanchester car, driven in turn by Messrs. Rapson, Thomas and Duller, captured about thirty worlds' records, including the twelve hours. The distance covered was 1,148 miles 843yds. in the twelve hours at an average speed of 95.66 m.p.h. Among other records broken were the 500 to 1,100 miles and the 700 to 1,200 kilometres records. It was a wonderful performance, the car running practically the whole time at 100 m.p.h., the last 100 miles being covered in 14secs. under the hour. A particular feature of the achievement is the fact that the chassis was practically a standard Lanchester production, fitted with a higher gear than usual, and racing body. Some of these records have since been broken in the 200 miles race by much smaller though special racing cars.

Profit-Sharing Insurance.—Apparently the scheme under which the Motor Manufacturers and Traders' Mutual Insurance Company, Limited, allow its policy holders a share in its profits is not quite so extensive as our recent note on the subject indicated. The facilities we described under which anyone responsible for the payment of an annual premium of £100 or more was entitled to a share in the profits is limited in its operation to agents and brokers, etc. The private policy holder is, however, offered the option of receiving any no claim bonus to which he may be entitled in the form of shares or part of a share in the company.

THE WIRELESS EXHIBITION

THE Wireless Exhibition which opens at the Royal Albert Hall on September 27th will reveal all the latest developments in the production of the ideal wireless receiver. The wireless industry, in so far as broadcasting is concerned, is still only two or three years old; but, nevertheless, some extraordinary progress has been made, and it is possible to say without fear of exaggeration that apparatus which will be on view at the Albert Hall will leave little to be desired even by the most fastidious.

Just as the quality of the transmissions from the broadcasting stations has been almost perfected during the past year, so manufacturers of wireless receivers have devoted their energies to providing apparatus which will do full justice to the achievements of the Broadcasting Company.

Perhaps it may be said, without giving offence to those who have been responsible for the production of the broadcast receiver, that some of the earlier examples of receivers could not be described as other than experimental or evolutionary designs when comparison is made with the apparatus which is now available.

We have had the opportunity of inspecting a number of the new models, and the impression received is that the chief aim of the designers has been to achieve the utmost in service with the minimum demand for attention to the apparatus by the user. Sets are more robustly constructed, plainer in design, perhaps, but easier to operate and maintain. One should, of course, remember that, while simplicity of operation and a minimum of operating controls is a desirable feature, yet if this characteristic is insisted upon to an unreasonable extent by the purchaser disappointment may result, for the reason that in order to obtain great "selectivity" it is necessary to add to the number of adjustments to be made. By selectivity, of course, is meant the ability of the receiver to select one station to the exclusion of all others which might, in the case of poorly selective receivers, "jamb" reception of the desired broadcasting station.

This year, in order to bring broadcast receivers up to date, provision has been made for the reception of the long-wave high-power station in addition to the short-wave stations which at present transmit the B.B.C. programmes officially. The permanent inclusion of a high-power long-wave station in the B.B.C. system is now almost certain, and this provides a special attraction for those who live near the coast, where interference with the short-wave broadcast programmes by ships' wireless traffic has been so marked. The long-wave transmission is entirely free from this disadvantage.

At the present time, when valves are available so designed as to require very little current for lighting the filaments, portable sets are particularly in vogue, because heavy batteries or accumulators can be dispensed with. Naturally, it is very convenient to have a receiver so light and compact that it can be carried about from place to place, but it should be remembered that such sets must usually sacrifice a certain amount of efficiency in order to render them easily portable. A receiver of this nature should not be regarded as a substitute for the permanent installation of the house, but rather as an auxiliary. A little extra weight in the home set is no objection, and may often indicate more robust construction.

Portability in the house is unnecessary, for it is now possible, without any complication, to run wires from the set to loud speakers or telephones to different rooms in the house and switch on the set from any room as required.

The loud-speaker, which in early days probably offended the ears of more listeners than it pleased, has done much towards earning for itself more sympathetic recognition. Loud-speakers are now available which fall very little short of the telephones in quality of reproduction, and need no longer be shunned as unmusical instruments.

Those who up till now have hesitated about purchasing a receiver because they anticipated changes in design due to the rapid progress of the art of broadcasting need no longer, in our opinion, delay on that account. Broadcasting has by now settled down to such a state that it is most unlikely that any important alterations to the general design of receivers by the best manufacturers will be introduced. The stages of experimental development of the commercial general purpose broadcast receiver have passed. Only one difficulty now presents itself to the prospective owner of a receiver, and that is the choice of the type and make of instrument. As regards efficiency and general performance, there is little to choose between the receivers of the best known manufacturers. Competition has seen to it that there are no wide differences in quality between similar priced sets by different well known makers. It is well, however, to warn the prospective purchaser against a hasty choice from among firms which have not yet established a reputation. It is not suggested, of course, that high-class sets are not to be found among some of the younger wireless companies, but in view of the fact that there are many new firms manufacturing apparatus which have not the experience and skill of the older companies behind them it is well to be cautious within reason.

B.T.H. LOUD SPEAKERS

B.T.H. Loud Speakers are soundly constructed, both mechanically and electrically, and reproduce speech and music without distortion or undue resonance. They give the greatest volume of sound that it is possible to obtain without impairing the tone. Each instrument is provided with an adjustable air-gap. ## THE COMING MODES BEGIN TO MATERIALISE

LONG, TIGHT SLEEVES FOR DAY WEAR: EMBROIDERIES, FUR AND FRINGE.

SINCE writing last week I have been to several representative dress shows, and the general impression conveyed to me is slimmness and shortness; tunics that might be coats, coats that suddenly decided to be tunics; embroideries on everything, in silk, wool, sequins; myriads of the tiniest beads dyed to every conceivable colour. Very long tight sleeves for day, and a complete absence of sleeves by night. The use of much fur of mysterious character, such as Russian rat, baby seal (that has to be mounted on gutta-percha), a special breed of baby rabbits—a Cheshire industry—marked like chinchilla; many buttons, and a considerable amount of fringe; these representing the ingredients that, allied with Georgette, crêpe de Chine, Ottoman silk, satin and velvet, go to make up the modes for the autumn and winter months.

At first, one is more than a little embarrassed by all the riches flung at our feet by enterprising couturières, and I, personally, feel overwhelmed by the many new and lovely colours.

There are, in particular, two shades of oyster—one the delicate grey of the inside of the shell, the other the much deeper tone of the outside. At Mme. Barri's, 33, New Bond Street, whose dress display took place the other day, these two peculiarly seductive nuances found specific recognition in two notable creations.

The first, a gown of Georgette in the paler shade mounted over pale pink crêpe de Chine to give it a roseate hue, had almost a Victorian suggestion, save that it was soft and clinging; the transparency being drawn into soft gauged folds midway down the skirt, these held in place at regular intervals by perpendicular bands of the Georgette, a narrow "flange" floating out either side.

The other was of chiffon velvet of the deeper tone, a straight sheath gown that just below the knees resolved into a slim flounce of a boldly patterned pale gold metal lace. This, an evening confection, was accompanied by a glorious cloak of the same velvet with a great ruffled collar, the whole lined gold lamé.

A wisp of a frock of shaded blue chiffon, the delicate azure of a summer cloud-flecked sky, had the very lightest, most fairy-like embroidery of diamanté introduced across the front, and was completed by a long wide scarf of the shaded chiffon, one edge of which was caught close round the throat, quite high up, reminding one of a whimple, the ends floating airily behind.

Another most arresting evening model was carried out in a pale, cold green heavy-weight Georgette, quite straight and slim to the knees, where there was worked into the material a green silk braid fringe, rows of this carried down to the hem of the short skirt and a single line of it up the left side back to the shoulder.

Impressed, however, as Mme. Barri obviously is by the lure of slimmness, she is far too keen an artist and clever a couturière to bank entirely on this decree. She has models to suit all tastes and figures.

Illustrated is a two-piece suit, to be seen in these salons, effected in bottle-green zibilene, the straight frock displaying a large oval-shaped motif worked in fine yellow wool, and, together with the coat, having the fashionable narrow insets of Ottoman silk, a final touch of distinction being accorded by collar and cuffs of Russian rat, and a charming hat of green felt with a touch of embroidery.

An older woman will find very much to her taste a gown of black chenille lace, to which a strikingly effective silhouette is given by applied bands of black satin. This has long, close-fitting sleeves, is mounted over gold tissue, and at one side has two immensely long tassels, the one gold and the other a tender pink.

A cleverly conceived and executed convertible idea comprises a bridge and dinner gown. It is carried out in black marocain, a quaint skeleton coat, with long sleeves, that finishes at the back in a deep square collar, on being slipped off revealing a sleeveless top of filmy black lace, a touch of pastel-coloured Oriental embroidery just delicately enlivening the scheme.

A very marked feature of the season is the breaking up of the long backs of coats, tunics and dresses by a narrow inset line of some contrasting colour or material. This occurs so persistently in one form or another that it cannot fail to impress itself on the least observant. Sometimes it starts at the neck and terminates midway down; again, one sees it commencing at the hem and merely carried to a long waistline, while from neck to hem it is insistent.

Those who are looking out for the latest wool material suitable for coats and skirts will be glad to hear of a flecked velour. It is not easy to describe exactly what this looks like, because the flecking is so slight a thing, yet all-sufficient to give a speckled, broken-up surface without actually disturbing the general tone. A brownish oatmeal shade fashioned a tailored suit at 33, New Bond Street, the half-length coat flounced, collared and cuffed with civet cat.

And just a final word of the children's clothes in these salons. Always supremely attractive, they appeal this season as more than exceptionally charming, and include the dearest little pelisses with capes of fine cloth or velvet-trimmed fur, simple useful day dresses, and the daintiest of party frocks.

Worn by a tiny, chubby-faced mannequin was a white and pale yellow organdie, the skirt one mass of wee picot-edged frills, alternately white and yellow; a demure little soft blue silk frock having a pleated back and a straight smock-like front, and being worn with turned-down collar of white muslin.

The same small maiden displayed a picturesque bridesmaid's frock, the sweetest old-world thing of carnation pink silk, the full skirt, touching the ground, adorned with waved lines of many tiny gold lace frills, a deep cape collar of the same lace frills falling about the baby shoulders.

Mme. Barri is truly a modiste of many parts and varied interests, besides investing everything she touches with a certain individual exclusiveness.

AUTUMN PREOCCUPATIONS

BEAUTIFUL CANDLES.

Very few of us nowadays have to rely on candle-light for illumination in dark evenings, but at the same time very few of us care to do without them for bedroom use, and as part of the decoration of the dinner-table and for similar uses nothing is ever likely to take their place. Flowers in winter-time are not always easy to secure in quite the abundance one wishes, but the dinner-table—on which the colour scheme, supported by the flowers, is accentuated by such candles as those made by Messrs. J. C. and J. Field, Limited, of 15, Upper Marsh, London, S.E.1—will look its most charming in spite of that. Messrs. Field's is probably the oldest candle-making factory in England, for there are records of a Thomas Field who established himself as a wax chandler early in the sixteenth century on the same spot on Lambeth Marsh as Messrs. Field's factory now occupies. A specialty of Messrs. Field's is the "Nell Gwynn" candle, finished by hand and offered in three sizes, 12ins., 10ins. and 8ins. in length. They are perfect in burning, made in an attractive old-world tapering shape and in twenty-one colours which are solid-dyed.

THE NEW VOGUE OF THE SHAWL.

The new popularity of the shawl has made every woman covetous of such a belonging and, now that the evenings draw in, what more charming occupation could be devised than that of fashioning one of these beautiful wraps in the height of the mode and so useful for evening wear? The first step in that direction is to purchase from newsagent or fancy needlework shop, or from Messrs. Tillotsons (Bolton), Limited, Mealhouse Lane, Bolton, a copy of the Needlewoman for September. The Needlewoman, which will be sent post free monthly for an annual subscription of 5s., is always interesting, but this is a particularly fine number. The shawls illustrated are fashioned from many fabrics, Georgette, cashmere, voile or marocain, and the fringes and decorations are carried out in the exquisite "Estella," "Anchor" stranded cotton, "Scintilla" and similar materials manufactured by Messrs. Clark and Co., whose "Anchor" trade mark is so well known as a guarantee of the best. Literally, the articles printed in this issue would teach any woman who was anything of a needlewoman how to produce a ten-guinea shawl at a cost of thirty shillings, and, at that, a shawl with a suggestion of Spanish or delicate French work, as taste might decide, and the demier cri of fashion. Really one hardly knows whether the pleasure of working at so charming a handicraft or wearing the result would be the greater.

THE WORCESTER AND NAVAL CADETSHIPS.

It has recently been announced that the Admiralty have granted a limited number of nominations for Royal Naval Cadetships to the Thames Nautical Training College, H.M.S. Worcester. They come under a new special scheme of entry, and boys who have served two years in the Worcester and are between sixteen years eight months and seventeen years of age are eligible.

FLOWERS FOR THE WINTER.

The arrival of the annual catalogue of Messrs. Sutton and Sons of Reading reminds one that if the winter months are to be made sweet and pleasant by the presence of bulbs in bloom their purchase and planting must be no longer delayed. The new catalogue is very well illustrated and covers a very wide field. The amateur who would raise a few flowers for the house without a greenhouse will find such trusty favourites as the Chinese Sacred Lily illustrated and its culture fully explained, while those with greenhouses at their disposal or who are thinking of planting lavishly in the shrubbery or garden will find equally interesting information. Some good collections of bulbs are offered at remarkably low prices and the selection of bulbous plants for the rock garden is particularly good. A very useful fruit-storing cabinet, which is 4ft. in height and contains ten trays each 2ft. square, so that it offers a total space of 40ft. square for storing fruit, must certainly be mentioned.

A GOLDEN BOOK OF DOWN QUILTS.

It is by no means too early to go into the matter of warm bed coverings for the winter; the woman who would arrange it satisfactorily could not possibly do better than write to Messrs. Williamson and Cole, Limited, High Street, Clapham, S.W.4, for their Golden Book of Down Quilts. It is really a splendid production, and it is difficult to believe that anyone could want better examples of these luxuries than those offered, or expect to find them anywhere at so low a price so good in value. The prices range from £10 15s. to 21s. Among those at the former price are exquisite artistic productions, such as the "Golden Pheasant" quilt, where a hand-printed satin panel is set in a satin border and filled with the finest special quality down; 6ft. by 6ft., it costs £10 7s. 6d. It can be made in many colours, but is illustrated with a black background, golden insertion, and a panel in tones of blue, green, brown and gold. For some rooms the "Adam" panelled quilt, offered in black and gold with a central medallion of Wedgwood blue, will be absolutely the ideal choice. The "Georgian" quilt, where black is relieved by a pretty frame of bright colours toning with the central panel, will suit some particular environments admirably, and in all these cases and many others the illustration of the quilt in colour is faced by patterns of the material in several colourings. Turning to cheaper quilts, the "Delphinium" quilt in plain sateen, with appliqué of cretonne and panel of contrasting colour, 5½ft. by 4ft., is only 67s. 6d., and the "Monogram" quilt, made in plain colours, filled with real down and ventilated throughout, is offered in the same size in sateen at 58s. 9d., or in Jap silk at 86s. 9d., with a two-letter monogram embroidered in the corner in silk. The latter part of the book contains many patterns of the "Cambric" quilts, offered for one guinea each, such as the "Bargain" quilt, 5½ft. by 4ft., in printed cambric. These "Cambric" quilts are shown in many charming designs and colourings which would look well in any room and stand considerable wear. There are also at the end of the book quite a number of patterns in various materials with estimates as to the cost when made up in various styles. The "Series D" patterns are particularly delightful. They suggest that the hardest wear would have little effect on them. These, in the 5½ft. by 4ft. size, made with a panel of plain sateen and two narrow strappings of contrasting colour work out at 36s. 9d. The question of re-covering quilts is also dealt with very fully, the prices and sizes being plainly given.
